Two dogs with obstructive uropathy secondary to benign prostatic hypertrophy were treated using percutaneous radiofrequency ablation and selective balloon thermal coagulation. Bipolar radiofrequency energy (mean power = 30 W, maximum power = 60 W) was delivered during transrectal ultrasound guidance to the prostatic urethra. Thermal coagulation was delivered at multiple points, with a maximum of four devices per session. Both dogs had prior surgery and attempted perineal catheterization; therefore, posttreatment urinary catheterization was required in both dogs until a normal urinary flow rate could be

A liquid chromatographic-electrospray-mass spectrometric (LC-ESI-MS) method based on liquid-liquid extraction of 2-APB, the main active metabolite of LSD, and the determination of LSD, ICA and 2-APB in human blood samples is presented. The sample preparation is based on a liquid-liquid extraction of the analytes under acidic conditions using methyl tert-butyl ether (MTBE) and dichloromethane (DCM). High performance liquid chromatography (HPLC)-ESI-MS was used for the detection. The validated LC-ESI-MS method was applied to determine the concentration of the three analytes in blood samples from urine donors that had been exposed to moderate

Convergence Compulsion is an arcade-style, score-attack game that balances thinking fast and planning ahead. Each time you play, a character, color, and obstacle appear. Before long, you'll build relationships with characters and earn the power-ups that help you clear a path to victory. You can play alone, or against other players. But if you fall behind, you'll lose by default. You have only one shot to get on that matching wave. The character you play must try to match every color in the sequence. If you explode, you'll drop all power-ups and a fatal time penalty. So don't blow your high score until you've got at least one

The End. Empath, the award-winning point-and-click adventure game from NeverEndingDreams Studio, is now available on Xbox Live Arcade. The full release of Empath will be available as a digital download for Xbox Live Gold members starting April 30, 2010. Empath is the story of a distraught man who is haunted by the death of his wife, a young woman who was brutally murdered on an isolated winter highway. Highway E-31 is where all the bodies have been found. The police have declared it an accident. It is a cold and snowy night, and it's almost Christmas. "Empath" means "tuned in," like your antennae. But really, it means to feel the world. To truly empathize with another's emotions and understand their intentions. In the game, the protagonist listens to the characters in his life, the ones c9d1549cdd

A game jam game that I was lucky enough to be able to work on over the Christmas break. I basically just took in any suggestions that we had about the game itself or anything else that could be improved. Gameplay: Take your mouse and aim the red dot on the player ship, while the green dot represents the enemy. If you click when you are aiming, it will fire when you release the mouse. You can also click when you are moving to fire or fire while moving. Click on ships to fire at them. Project Status: The game is complete! I just have to work on it a bit more and upload it to here. I also have a prototype client for iOS and Android. It will take a little bit to get it setup and working. A demo will be uploaded when the game is released. That's happened while a number of oil producers are ramping up drilling activity to meet demand for Canadian oil. READ MORE: Oil prices drop 2.5 per cent in early trading But, as Alex Pourbaix of the University of Calgary's Energy Resource Monitoring and Assessment Lab explains, the drop is not all related to "production costs" — the price of crude oil minus the costs of extraction. "That's where there's been no production costs," Pourbaix said. Exhibition This article covers the ~6-hour self-guided tour of the exhibition "The Lord of the Rings: Journeys in Middle-earth," which was dedicated to celebrating the 50th anniversary of the publication of the first book in Tolkien's trilogy of The Lord of the Rings. Here's my story of my one-day visit to this exhibition (and it's really the one that takes you the farthest, so it's good that it's on the main floor and not below ground): When we read the book for Christmas, I thought it would be such a wonderful opportunity to see some of the sights that we read about. Plus, the Ring is so iconic, I always wanted to see the most famous ring in the world and in Tolkien's time. So I was pretty excited about the exhibition, even before my sister went out and bought a pass for me. The exhibition cost $35 for a guest pass and $19 for a student pass to include admission to all eight themed exhibition halls. So it was kind of a steal, but it wasn't so cheap that I could take a friend of mine. I told my friends to buy passes to go with me if they wanted. Anyway, when I was buying my ticket for the exhibition, I found out that there was a special program, which was completely free, at the end of the exhibition. Actually, it's a program that I am so glad to have been a part of. It was a blessing to be able to see all my favorite artworks in the exhibition and the Ring all over again. Houses and Elders, and Ring-craft (11AM-5PM) My last exhibit hall was "Houses and Elders, and Ring-craft" which was about the hobbits and the making of the Ring. This was the program I was most looking forward to. In fact, I thought I could sit there and just look at art and it would be fun. This was not at all the case, but it did whet my appetite for what I would see later. The first few artists that popped into my head were Gandalf, Sam, Frodo, Sauron, Aragorn, etc. The rest of my friends were in two minds. One of my friends said: "Oh, I like it. It's so well done. I think I'd even marry it." I knew she meant the Ring. (Wait a second, isn't there an exhibition called "Fifty
