The deal, which was announced Monday and involves Deutsche Bank AG, Standard Chartered Plc, the Royal Bank of Scotland Group PLC, Bank of Ireland PLC, U.K.'s Barclays Plc and Ulster Bank PLC, was reached through the international, multijurisdictional, global settlement program, the Attorney General's office said. The lawsuit was originally filed in August 2017 in the U.S. District Court in Manhattan against the banks for charging processing fees on money transfers. All six banks have agreed to the settlement without admitting liability. Attorney General Barbara D. Underwood said in a statement
