ABOVE: I created this image with pencil and paper. It took about an hour to create and another 45 minutes to edit. I did not use a tripod, so this is a real-world type of image I shot at street level.

BELOW: This is a version created with Lightroom on the same iPhone. It took about 17 minutes to create and another four or five to edit. Canon EOS RP. With an iPhone Apple Pencil, Adobe Photoshop Sketch and Lightroom. ABOVE: The iPhone image is in Vignette. I created the Pencil image within Photoshop Elements in "Painter" mode. BELOW: Within Adobe Photoshop Lightroom, I created the Pencil image in "Artists" Mode. I used my own iPhone. It took approximately eight minutes to create the image and an additional 10 minutes to edit. F/33, ISO 44, 1/1250, 18mm F/4L lens. Of course, some of the features I would like to see added are: Stitching. Panorama and HDR. Better raw export for image formats I use. DSLR support. And yes, of course, better filter and blur effects. There do seem to be new features and added apps that at times blend in well with Photoshop's user interface. But at the same time, there are many features that feel out of place. Places where the user experience can feel compromised. And perhaps the most awkward thing with Photoshop is how the color space options continue to feel so superfluous. The only thing these days is to change the color space and you will be okay, as long as you do not work with a lot of color grading. Still, even with that, it often feels like you want to just select and paint with colors. And in Lightroom, that is not at all a bad thing.
